

High production key to recession--Dr. Jones

By NORM NETKO

A higher economic rate of growth (higher production) is the solution to the current contraction, or recession, in our economy. This view was maintained by Dr. Bryce Jones, associate professor of economics at St. Joseph's, in a lecture on Feb. 16.

He spoke on "Economic Problems Facing the New Frontier".

According to Dr. Jones, our economy is using up the vast store of inventories built up in recent years.

This, and not a collapse in consumer spending, is responsible for the present contraction. Dr. Jones predicts that by June we will be on our way to recovery.

However, "in 1961, four-hundred thousand more workers will enter the labor force than were in it in 1960," said Dr. Jones. Unless the growth rate of our economy is increased, he warned, 13 per cent of the labor force will be stagnant by 1965.

He said that such policies as emergency tax cuts are not good, and added that the Kennedy administration would probably be content with providing compensation and other measures to relieve suffering but would stop short of drastic changes in economic policy. Any long-range public works projects would not take effect in time to rescue the economy, but would be intended to stimulate the economy over a period of years.

Dr. Jones discussed another serious problem now confronting our economy: chronic inflation.

"Consumer prices have risen 66 per cent since World War II," said Dr. Jones, and "the concentrated industries and labor unions are the culprits."

A new kind of inflation has been evident in the past few years, Dr. Jones explained. He called it the "cost-push" variety, to distinguish it from the usual "demand-pull" type of inflation.

It is characterized by labor unions, which demand higher wages in proportion to the rise in production and often beyond this production increase. This is just another "cost" to industry, which in turn raises prices to equal or surpass the wage hike.

Dr. Jones said that the Kennedy administration's policy on inflation is one of "economics by admonition". Their intention is to put pressure on labor and industry to keep wage and price demands moderate.

They would do this, said Dr. Jones, by threats of exposure and by invoking anti-trust laws. "It might work," added Dr. Jones, "but the odds are against it."

The balance of payments and the gold problem was another area touched upon in the lecture. Our balance on current account (difference between export and import revenues) is favorable, said Dr. Jones, but this balance is outweighed by U.S. foreign investments and loans.

"We have experienced a $4 billion gold outflow in the last 3 years," said Dr. Jones. Foreigners, afraid of a devalued American dollar, have been cashing in their short-term American assets and demanding gold.

Dr. Jones suggested that we encourage foreigners to spend the money we lend them in the United States.

Pumas speculate on mysterious steaming Raleigh hall cavern

By Y. J. THOELE

"Double, double toil and trouble
Fire burn and cauldron bubble.
... Like a hell-broth boil and bubble."

What is the origin of the Rec hall hole? Countless Joemen have racked their brains in vain attempts to plumb the mystery of the disappearing and reappearing abyss. Their "answers" have been many and varied.

Certain members of the daily 9 a.m. Raleigh hall crowd have been persistently spreading the tale that Rec hall coffee is brewed within the steaming pit and, despite ceaseless denials by Bro. Gerard, the rumor continues to grow.

Other Pumas, recalling the recent showing of the movie "Time Machine" in the auditorium, fearfully whisper, "There's morelets in there." To substantiate their claims they recall the weird, piercing sirens which blew during January finals and cite the fact that 149 of their fellow students disappeared during semester break.

Some disgruntled underclassmen have theorized that "at least eight or ten" girls at the last mixer must have come from the shadowy

St. Joseph's reorganizes athletic recruitment program

By JOHN BABIONE

In an attempt to assure itself the strongest possible athletic program and make the best use of limited funds for athletic scholarships, St. Joe recently reorganized its athletic recruiting program.

According to Fr. Richard P. Baird, director of athletics, the new program will give the college more detailed and accurate information on prospective athletes through the cooperation of the coaches with the alumni.

The aim of the program is to place athletic grants in the hands of those most qualified academically, athletically, and on the basis of need, Fr. Baird said.

Under the new system all prospective students expressing interest in any varsity sport will receive a letter from Fr. Baird. They will be asked to fill out forms describing their physical condition and their high school athletic achievements and return them to the college. The forms will be filed for later use should the student enroll in St. Joe.

Those prospects who inquire concerning athletic scholarships will be asked to fill out additional forms. In addition, the coaches will investigate the athletic background of each applicant.

Athletic grants are available in football and basketball only, and only in limited numbers.

To supplement the information they receive from the applicants and their high school coaches, the college coaches will request alumni in the applicant's area to scout him in action and report their opinions of his ability to the college.

Fr. Baird hopes that this new procedure will yield more detailed and accurate information than has been the case in the past, when the athletic department was frequently flooded with unsolicited, and sometimes inaccurate information about high school athletes applying for grants.

The coaches will attempt to personally contact as many of the applicants as possible. Then, after studying all available information on all applicants, they will recommend, with the approval of Fr. Baird, those prospects they feel are most deserving of scholarships.

Final decisions on the recommendation will be made by the scholarship committee. They will determine which applicants will receive the grants, and also how much aid each will receive.

Applicants for athletic scholarships must meet the same entrance requirements as other students: graduation from high school with 15 units of credit, of which 10 must be in academic fields; and, two of the following—C or 80% average or higher for high school work, rank in upper half of high school class, or IQ of 110 or higher.

Athletes must also maintain an above probationary index to retain their eligibility, and their scholarships.

Fr. Baird and coaches Ed Dwyer and Jim Holstein will welcome at any time information on possible future athletes from either students or alumni. This facilitates early contact between the college and the prospects, and helps assure the future strength of St. Joseph's athletic teams.

depths of the tarpaulin-covered cavern.

From other quarters come rumblings of "secret passage to Drexel," "leprechauns" "coeds," and "St. Joe water supply."

The truth: at the bottom of the hole, which has been opened twice this year, is an antiquated steam pipe, subject to rupture without notice.

Following repairs in November the cavity was closed but was reopened in January when the pipe once more spewed forth. Repairs were completed and, probably in anticipation, the hole was left open. Sure enough "Old Faithful" came through once more and has only recently been rewelded, though the pit has yet to be filled in.

Young Christian Students are regrouping for spring semester

The YCS (Young Christian Students) of St. Joe are reorganizing their group for what they hope will be a fruitful semester, both for the members and for the whole student body.

YCS is a national organization which endeavors to bring back Christian ideals to society by properly training the future leaders of that society—Catholic students.

A secondary purpose of YCS is the re-Christianization of our own immediate surroundings. The members meet once a week for an informal discussion of current social problems, especially those prevalent at St. Joe.

The proper Christian outlook is first gleaned from a short reading of the Bible and questions which help to explain it.

Next, the members observe or discuss some current problem that they see around them. After defining the situation they judge how bad it is and what practical means they can take to correct it.

Finally, they act—they agree on a trial solution that they will use during the coming week. At the next meeting they discuss the suc-

Junior retreat starts Friday; Fr. Stanton guides retreatants

Fr. Terence Stanton, O.S.B., will be retreat master for the junior retreat this weekend, Feb. 24-26.

Because of conflict with class schedules no talks will be given on Saturday morning.

Dates for subsequent retreats are: sophomores, March 10-12; freshmen, March 17-19.

The 8:30 Sunday Mass will be reserved for the retreatants on their retreat weekends.

The schedule for the junior retreat is as follows:

Friday 8:00 p.m.—Opening conference followed by confessions.

Saturday 2:00 p.m.—Conference followed by confessions.

4:00 p.m.—Conference.

8:00 p.m.—Conference followed by benediction. Sunday 8:30 a.m.—Mass (reserved for retreatants).

2:00 p.m.—Conference.

4:00 p.m.—Concluding conference, benediction, and the Papal blessing.

Ramesh elected king of CSF Mardi Gras

Bob Ramesh, a St. Joe senior, was elected king of the Mardi Gras at the College of St. Francis, on Feb. 13. It was the first time in four years that a St. Joe man won the contest.

Ramesh competed with candidates from three other colleges.

Knowledge of procedure plus patience would speed repairs

The showers in Bennett hall, the broken windows in Halas, pencil sharpeners in Noll, and burned out light bulbs everywhere have been frequent topics of discussion at Student Council meetings all year.

Fr. Paul Wellman, business manager of the college, appeared at last Monday's Council meeting in an attempt to answer some of the questions about campus maintenance that have been consistently cropping up.

Most of the student gripes have been legitimate. No one enjoys cold showers in January. No one likes to sleep in a room where the inside of the windows is caked with ice because the heat is turned off or the radiators aren't working.

But repairs are often delayed because no student takes the problem to the proper office. Rather, everyone complains about it over coffee in the Rec hall, and no one really looks for a solution.

Fr. Wellman asked the prefects and interhall representatives at the meeting to explain the proper procedure to the students in their hall. Any complaint, he explained, should be taken to the floor prefect who will in turn report it to him at the business office or to Brother Pius in the Dean of Students office.

A work order will be made out and channeled by Fr. Wellman to the appropriate persons, the carpenters, the plumbers, the janitor, and so forth. The job will then be done.

However, many students still feel they are being slighted or ignored when they do report a problem and nothing at all is done about it.

Fr. Wellman declared that no student is purposely put off. "The primary purpose of our office," he said, "is to render service to St. Joseph's college. And the students are a prime consideration."

He pointed out that the college maintains a skeleton crew—"enough people to take care of the regular maintenance when it comes up." When a number of work orders come to him he must frequently decide which ones are most urgent and which ones he can delay until the crews have enough time to get to them.

Some jobs, he said, the crews cannot leave immediately unless there is an emergency.

Thus, Fr. Wellman's job is a daily process of selection. He is faced with a multitude of work orders and he must select those which are most necessary and delay those which can safely be delayed until summer.

It is often difficult for a student to see just why his request doesn't receive instant attention. Few students understand either the immediate needs or the long range plans of the college. And many complaints are often just something to "gripe about"; the really urgent problems are usually promptly taken care of.

By understanding and following the proper procedure for reporting a maintenance problem, and by understanding the difficulties under which the business office and the maintenance crews work, it seems that needed repairs could be speeded up.

This might then leave the crews with enough extra time to go around installing pencil sharpeners.

Fr. Wellman tells Council of maintenance problems

By CHARLES SCHUTTROW

Fr. Paul Wellman, college business manager, appeared at the Student Council meeting last Monday night in Merlini Lounge to answer questions concerning the maintenance system here at St. Joseph's.

"Reporting, channeling, and performance are the steps through which our maintenance system operates," said Fr. Wellman, in touching upon such student problems as burned out light bulbs, broken windows, and malfunctioning shower systems.

"If the student finds something wrong, he should report it to his prefect who will then relay the problem to the business office. The business office will then assign personnel to correct the problem."

He also emphasized that students must not expect immediate service when something goes wrong, because the skeleton maintenance crew is often employed on an emergency job which cannot be discontinued.

The long weekend of the first week of March was discussed. As it stands now, Saturday morning classes would be excused and classes would resume at 8:00 a. m., Monday, March 6. Al Hanley, Council president, said he will continue to request that Monday be free instead of Saturday.

Bill Moriarty, Council vice-president, proposed that students who are presently on probation and sleep through their eight or nine o'clock classes be excused from the new probation rule requiring them to outline a chapter from the text in the course they cut.

He said such an accident is inevitable during the course of a semester and the student should be excused from the ruling. He added, however, that the student missing a ten o'clock class should be held responsible to the probation rules.

The scholastic committee said any student on probation at the semester is held to that standing regardless of his index the following mid-term.

Any freshman interested in entering the tutoring program can get his application blank from Terry Isselhard, freshman class president. The council discussed the problem concerning compensation of the student tutors.

It was proposed that each pupil in the tutoring system contribute a fee to pay the tutor for his work. "We have done our part, now we expect the freshmen to do theirs," said Al Hanley.

The proposal for an upper level course in business letter writing was rejected. Hanley said that remedial courses are generally discouraged, even though they may be most beneficial for particular students.

Bill Morraity said talent show tryouts will begin Thursday, Feb. 23, in the auditorium and an additional session will be held Monday, Feb. 27, in case all contestants are not squeezed in Thursday.

Paul Andorfer, sophomore class president, raised the question of light installation at the immediate south side of the powerhouse.

Night lighting is very poor along the walk next to the south side of the powerhouse, which is used regularly by students living in Gallagher and Noll halls.

Fr. Wellman said this lighting condition could not be remedied at least until summer.

Council Critique

By MARTY WATERS

I would like to congratulate the Student Council on its recommendations for the upcoming Student Union building. The proposals, particularly those which referred to recreation space and line cutting, showed foresight and should be appreciated by the student body.

It doesn't look as though we are going to have an upper level course in business letter writing next year.

The Scholastic Committee brought the matter to Fr. Bierberg's attention at its last meeting, and he said the faculty and administration just did not believe in remedial courses of any kind.

He did, however, give John Mascotte a free hand in setting up a program concerning this matter. It was suggested that one of the English profs might be asked to give a few informal lectures on correct grammatical usage and that sample letters might be submitted to some senior English majors who would correct them.

It seems kind of ridiculous that I should be devoting a major part of a column to a topic of this sort. It is most embarrassing, both to the students themselves, and to the school in general when a number of seniors admit that they are not sure if they can use the English language well enough to write a decent business letter.

But the admission has been made; that in itself took courage, and now it is up to those unsure seniors to decide if they want help or not.

A questionnaire on this topic will soon be circulated among the seniors. If enough are interested, a program approximating the one described above will be attempted. If not, I've only wasted a little space.

Disappearing spirit during losing games angers new student

Dear Editor,

I would like to congratulate the basketball team for playing their best against Valpo, but I criticize the student body on their general lack of interest and lack of school spirit. All of you who were at the game Tuesday night recall Valpo's school spirit throughout the game, especially when they were losing.

Now I ask, where was St. Joe's spirit when we were losing in our football and basketball games? It seems our student body cheers and backs the team only when we are winning. Then too, I haven't noticed the faculty doing anything to improve our morbid spirit, except to criticize the team. This is your college as much as it is ours.

Let us support St. Joe and take up this slogan when the "chips" are down: "when the going gets tough, the tough get going."

Sincerely,

Jim Readwin,

Dear Mr. Malley:

I am submitting the following letter for insertion in an un-named, but what I assume to be a "from the people" column which appears in Stuff.

Relative to the editorial "Seniors Suddenly Discovering They Have Never Learned To Write," which appeared in the February 10 issue of Stuff, I should like to recommend the following to the author of the editorial:

- 1) That he repeat English 3 and 4
 - 2) That he repeat Philosophy 12
 - 3) That he take, or repeat, Journalism 41
- If he works diligently while taking these several courses, he may:

- 1) Learn how to USE the English language
- 2) Learn how to think in a logical way
- 3) Learn how to write, not a letter, but an editorial

Sincerely,

Ralph A. Marini
Dept. of Business Adm.

P.S. Not one word of the foregoing will be edited without written permission from me.

Gentlemen, it seems that we have been unfair to a certain element on our campus, the coeds. In view of this this coming week is designated as be kind to coeds week. And the special emphasis will be placed on trying not to "cut them down."

And speaking of being cut down, God save the Queen, Walter, two flags, two flags.

Bill Fredericks has recently acquired a new nickname. It seems that Lover, as he is called in some Chicago circles, has been making quite a hit. And he has been telling the boys just the opposite too.

Jerry Ruzika has let it be known that he intends to get an A in history 32 in spite of any obstacles placed before him by anybody.

Things to be thankful for this month: Bill Cormack's clean raincoat. Denny Mudd's fine printing. Just Mascotte. Two t's, final e. School spirit among the co-eds.

Fr. Schaefer losing 30 lbs. for the faculty game.

Dan Zawila's column.

Dear Mr. Griffin.

Don Davia was caught last Sunday afternoon. You tell them what you were caught doing, Don. And with a girl yet, Sissy!

Jim McCauley has finally succeeded in translating the long lost language of the apes. After many years of serious study, he is now able to read Tarzan comic books without using the footnotes.

Brother Gerard has announced that the Rec hall has received a Volkswagon dealership, and models will be arriving shortly.

Varsity views

By BOB ROSPENDA

The Pumas, who have been eating humble pie most of this season, go into tonight's season finale with Marian with a gleam in their eye.

The Pumas usually are very rude hosts to the men from Marian, so the Big Red hope to finish this 1960-61 campaign with a brief moment of glory. In this same game last year the Pumas were very rude indeed, as they clobbered Marian 112-88. In that game Bobby Williams went wild, erupting for 45 points to finish his college career. Earlier this year St. Joe was able to gain a 73-63 victory against Marian at Indianapolis.

Tonight's contest will see Al Whitlow and Ron Holstein, senior co-captains, playing their last game for St. Joe's. Both have been starters since their sophomore year and have compiled impressive three year records while playing here at Pumaville.

This week we would like to feature two of the promising sophomores who hold the key to next year's success.

Bill Braunbeck, a sophomore from New Albany, Ind., teamed up with Jim Crowley this year to give the Pumas a solid backcourt combination. This 6'-1" physical education major possesses a quick pair of hands which make him a good ball handler and an agile defenseman.

Bill graduated from Our Lady of Providence High School in Clarksville, Ind., where he won letters in basketball, baseball and track. He was co-captain of his basketball team and captain of his baseball team.

Besides receiving several baseball awards, he was elected to the all-sectional team in basketball for two years and played in the annual All-Star game in his high school conference. While in high school Bill was a class officer and was a member of the National Honor Society. He also was president of the Catholic Student Mission Crusade in high school.

Last year at St. Joe's Bill played both freshman basketball and baseball.

Art Voellinger is another gleam of light in an otherwise dismal season. Art is a 6'-4" English-journalism major from Belleville, Ill. He is another one of those hard jumping men who prove invaluable as rebounders.

As a matter of fact, Art received his coach's award as best rebounder on his team in high school. Along with his rebounding, this 175 pound forward has a fine jump shot which is difficult to stop because of his great spring.

Art is a 1959 graduate of Cathedral High School in Belleville where he played basketball and baseball just as he does here at St. Joe's. In his senior year he captained both his basketball and baseball teams.

At Cathedral High Art also was student council treasurer while working on both the student newspaper and yearbook staff. Art graduated from high school with high scholastic honors, proving he is no slouch in the classroom either.

You can be sure that this hustling forward will be heard from next year.

Faculty cage-men will try to wrest coveted keg from Monogram Club

By JIM FRANCIS

St. Joe's annual faculty-Monogram club basketball game is scheduled for Tuesday, Feb. 28, at the fieldhouse. The opening tipoff will be at 8:00 p.m.

Tickets will be available from all Monogram club members at a cost of 40 cents. They may also be purchased at the door for 50 cents. Proceeds from the game will help finance the Monogram club's Christmas parties for orphan-ages.

To the victors will go the spoils, in this case the coveted "Keg" trophy, a gold beer keg, surmounted by a "J" and an academic mortarboard. (The "J" symbolizes the Monogram club; the mortarboard, the faculty; and the beer keg, the common bond that exists between the two.)

The trophy is now in the possession of the Monogram club as a result of their 44-42 victory over the faculty last year.

In the last contest the faculty played an inspired form of basketball with brilliant performances by Fr. Ernest Ranly with 11 points and 20 rebounds and coach Edward Dwyer with 11 points and 8 rebounds.

High men for the Monogram club were Lou Markowski with eight points and Les Klein and Bob Decker with seven apiece. Decker sank the winning basket with 58 seconds left to play.

This year the Puma Profs will be coached by Fr. Leonard Kostka and the Monogram club by Mickey Clark and J. C. Crowley. Puma co-captains Al Whitlow and Ron Holstein will referee.

The Monogram club team will consist of all senior Monogram members who are in condition to play.

Half-time entertainment will be provided by a special wrestling program featuring a tag match with Rod Pujo and "Terrible Turk" Dwyer opposing Mike Bartels and Vic "Tiny" Roos.

The Puma Profs will be paced by Jimmy Hostein, the 6-5 flash from Hamilton, O., "noted for his push and shove lay-up." Among his many awards is the High Point Trophy in the Wheelchair League for the Aged.

Ed Dwyer, 23-year-old 6-3 full-back, whose favorite shot, the "Dago Deathlock," makes him a threat in the Profs' line-up, has an optimistic outlook for the game. He said, "If our guys don't win, we will flunk all them guys."

"We'll never stop running," says Pat "Meadowlark" Lynch, the 6-0 forward (very forward), from Elkhart, Ind. Meadowlark played two years with the Monnett School reserve team. His favorite shot? Old Grandad, naturally.

Richard Flynn is expected to show the aggressive style of play which made him a stand-out with the "Hungry 5" in the St. Joe IM league many years ago, and earned him the Golden Bench Cushion Award.

Ralph A. Marini, a newcomer to the faculty squad, is expected to be a real dark horse. The 5-5 speedster from Milwaukee is part of the Profs' new youth movement.

Martin Ryan, prominent sociologist from Waukegan, Ill., lists his favorite shot as "the one that goes in." His only comment was, "This should be an interesting study of status and role conflict."

Fr. Paul Wellman, the tough guy from Locust Gap, is the Profs' new hatchet man. His age, "legal"; his experience, "15 notches"; his outlook, "Ole!"

John Delehanty, the 6-0 guard from Bronx, N.Y., is the team's most experienced player. He has participated in 1,000 choose-up games in the playgrounds of the Bronx, and played one bang-up season with the United States Army in the Philippines.

Rudolph Volz, a flashy example of the new line of compact model basketball players, was a stand-out in last year's game. The 5-7, 175 pound guard hails from Louisville, Ky.

Fr. Daniel Schaefer, the showboat of the faculty squad, will be in action again with his fabulous half-court set shot. A well-known campus personality, he is always a crowd-pleaser.

Ray Regner, a new addition to both the faculty and the faculty squad, is expected to turn in a creditable performance. The Paramount, Calif., "hard guy" has promised not to drive the "Black Beetle" on the hardwood.

Fr. Ambrose Ruschau plays an aggressive brand of driving basketball and adds experienced play-making ability to the faculty attack. His basketball experience

IM wrestling finals Feb. 28

The final matches in each weight division in the 1961 intramural wrestling tournament will be held on Tuesday, Feb. 28, in the fieldhouse at the halftime of the annual faculty basketball game.

In the 130 pound division the final match will pit John Jadryen against Andy Guagent. Tom Dobson will take on Dan Mobly in the 200 pound finale.

The finalists in the other weight divisions have not been decided yet. Here are the results of the early matches: Jim Braet defeated Dunk Hahn and Don Moll bested Ron Vendl in the 160 pound division.

In the 170 division it was Dave Beam over Dave Ludwa, Bob Muller over Tom Hurley, Al Zera over Tom Buscarini, Terry Isselhard over Ken Marcotte, Stan Stancukas over John George, Joe Strelczyk over Joe Barath, Jim Biernot over Tom Drennan, and Al Eschman over Dick Seitz.

In the heavyweight division Dennis Mudd took Ed Ryan, Jim McHenry defeated Ralph Frieberg, and Carmen DiGiovine took Lynn Webber. Semi-finals are being held this week.

Pumas downed by Evansville 98-89, Bellarmine 66-63; close ICC year in cellar with 2-10 record

The Bellarmine Knights edged the Pumas 66-63 last Monday to deliver St. Joseph's their fifteenth defeat in 19 outings. Evansville handed the Pumas their tenth ICC loss last Saturday 98-89.

The Pumas lacked a strong scoring punch against Bellarmine and were unable to command the lead after the first few minutes.

High point man for the Pumas was Ron Holstein with 16 followed by Jerry Patchman with 14 and Al Whitlow with 13.

Three of the Puma starting five turned in poor shooting percentages from the field, hitting under .250. Holstein was the only St. Joe player to have a good night from the field as he hit on 6 of 7 attempts.

St. Joe started the game with a scoring spurt which sent them to a 13-6 lead, but the Knights managed to stop the Puma attack midway through the first period and take the halftime lead 36-31.

The Pumas came charging back in the second period and twice succeeded in tying the score. However, the St. Joe attack lost its momentum both times and Bellarmine pulled ahead.

In the last minutes of the second half the Pumas managed to come within three points of the Knights, but a pair of free throws by Bellarmine's Westrick cinched the game for the Knights.

Saturday night, the Evansville Aces lead by big Dale Wise handed the Pumas their tenth league loss of the season.

Although the Pumas put together their finest offensive attack of the season, the final tally showed the Aces on top by the score of 98-89. Al Whitlow and Jerry Patchman tied for high point men for the Pumas with twenty-one each, but neither was able to equal the 31 points and 21 rebounds of Wise.

Midway through the first period it looked as if the game would turn into a rout for the Aces as they lead the Joemen by as much as 22 points.

However by the time the half had rolled around the Pumas had cut their lead to 14 points. As the second half started each team traded baskets by pivot men Patchman and Wise, and then the Pumas came alive and started to cut into the Aces lead.

Besides Whitlow and Patchman the Pumas also had two other men in the double-figure column. They were Ron Holstein with 18 before fouling out with five minutes left to play, and guard Jim Crowley who had 20 points for the night's effort.

Senior co-captain Whitlow led in the rebounding department with 11 and was followed by Crowley who had seven.

The defeat of the Pumas centered around their inability to control the backboards which were successfully cleared by the everpresent Wise and 6-4 senior forward Jim Nossett who managed to grab 12 rebounds eight of them in the second half and six of these the important defensive rebounds.

The final rebounding total showed the Aces ahead by ten, with 61 to the Pumas' 51.

Seifert frosh in intramural action

The East Seifert Guns battled their cousins, the East Seifert Scooters, to a tie last week in the freshman intramural league. Both teams were undefeated going into the game. They may mean unexpected trouble for the upper-class leagues in the intramural tournament.

Club News Literary contest now open to students

The History club outlined plans for a spring fieldtrip to sites of historical interest in the states of Indiana, Kentucky, and Tennessee at the February meeting. The sites under consideration for visit during the trip, tentatively set for the weekend of May 12, include Vincennes, New Harmony, and Madison, Ind.; Nashville and Chattanooga, Tenn.; and Perryville, Lincoln Memorial Park, Bardstown, Harrodsburg, and Louisville, Ky.

At the meeting, held on Feb. 9, club sponsor Mr. Richard Kilmer discussed the historical importance of the various proposed sites.

Correspondence to the respective chambers of commerce has been sent for information regarding accommodations. The trip will be discussed in fuller detail at the next meeting.

The club was pleased by the favorable student and faculty reaction to the first lecture of the 1960-61 History club lecture series which featured Dr. Bryce Jones who spoke on the economic problems facing the new administration.

The Geology club at their February meeting initiated plans for their annual spring field trip. The trip this year will be to the Ducktown, Tenn. area to study the complex geology of that particular section.

Since this area contains such a great deal of geology suitable to field study, this trip is considered one of the best on the annual club schedule.

The Ascension Thursday weekend of May 11-14 was chosen as the date for the trip since it will allow the club members to take a minimum of class cuts during their absence. Because of the great distance involved the trip will take four or five days. A committee was appointed for detailed planning of the trip.

The Newsletter committee reported that a good return of questionnaires which were sent to St. Joe geology alumni has stimulated progress on the forthcoming Newsletter. As soon as all information has been compiled the first Newsletter will be printed.

John Kiefer, club president, reported that the recent raffle was a success and brought the club the funds which will be needed for the field trip.

Club jackets have been ordered and will be received shortly.

It was announced that the Club plans to have a movie at its March meeting secured through the Shell Oil Company and dealing with some aspect of geology.

The Engineering club sponsored a lecture at its February 9 meeting which treated the field of cryogenics. Mr. Robert McKinney discussed the liquefaction and purification of atmospheric gases and the various uses of liquid oxygen, nitrogen, argon, helium, and hydrogen. Using liquid nitrogen to obtain temperatures approaching -320 F., Mr. McKinney demonstrated the effects of cryogenic temperatures (approaching absolute zero) on various materials.

Mr. McKinney appeared through the courtesy of the The Lind Company, a subsidiary of Union Carbide Corporation, with whom he is employed as a manager of public relations.

The club's March 10 meeting will feature another guest speaker from Western Electric Company.

At future meetings members will discuss the club's coming field trip to Standard Oil Company's Whiting petroleum refinery and a banquet for its junior members.

Two annual literary contests, offering $90 in prize money, have begun, and will accept entries until April 23. They are the Alumni Essay Contest and the Mary C. Pursley Award for creative writing, open to all St. Joe students.

The Alumni Essay Contest, offering $25 first prize and $15 second prize, is open to any type of literary essay: factual, speculative, or personal.

Excluded are honors theses, research papers, essays written by January graduates, essays entered in the Pursley or Hanley Science contests, or essays entered in Measure, unless they be typed and under a pseudonym.

The Mary C. Pursley Award for creative writing offers a single $50 prize. The winning composition must merit classification as creative writing of some literary excellence through an organized, imaginative, and fictitious unit. Entries may be in the form of short stories, personal essays, dramas, or poems of sonnet length (14 lines) or longer.

The judges' functions in this contest include the right to decide that no entry submitted is or sufficient excellence to warrant an award.

Only original work is eligible for either contest, and separate entries by the same writer must be entered under different pen names. Three typed, double spaced copies of each entry must be submitted.

Each title page must display in addition to the title and the writer's pen name the name of the contest in the upper right hand corner.

Included with each entry must be an envelop containing the title and writer's pen name on the outside and the writer's pen name and real name inside.

Entry copies and envelopes are to be given to any English instructor before midnight, April 23. Copies of contest instructions may be obtained from any English instructor at his office.

Puma skaters strengthened, but lose to Chicago Blades 6-3

Although strengthened by five new members, the St. Joe hockey squad dropped last Saturday's game 6-3 to the Chicago Blades to give it a league record of one win and two losses.

The Puma team started off on the right skate when Joe Heimbuch scored the first goal shortly after play started. Minutes later the Blades retaliated by scoring a pair of goals of their own.

The second period was disastrous for the St. Joe men as the Blades, controlled the puck and scored three times while holding the Pumas scoreless.

In the third period the Pumas outscored their opponents 2-1 as Steve Murphy and Brian Decker each scored, but the comeback was insufficient and the final score rested at 6-3 with the Pumas on the lower side.

The team, organized just before semester break by John Navigato, Tim Kennedy, and Steve Murphy, found itself a place in a four team league at Rainbo Arena in Chicago. Shaky at first, the team was given a boost when Fr. Schaefer stepped in with financial aid. The money comes from the pin-ball machine profits.

The team is scheduled to play 10 games this season. Alternating between Friday nights and Sunday afternoons, they will play eight regular games and two play-off games.

The Pumas lost their first league game to the Chicago All-Stars 9-5, and won their second league game by forfeit, 2-0. They played a non-league game with the Chicago All-Stars which ended in a 3-3 tie.
